HOW TO WRITE A THEME STATEMENT

The _____ book's genre _____ book's title _____ by _____ author is about _____ state the topic idea (e.g., trust, love, friendship)

and reveals that _____ say something about the human condition

Family Mission Statement

If you want your family to be strong and successful, you have to create a working plan. You need to know what direction you would like to head and how you are going to get there. Sit down together and write your family mission statement. It will be a powerful first step on your family's road to success.

Answer the following questions. On the next page, put your answers together in sentence format. Hang your mission statement in a common area where everyone in the family will see it often and refer to it frequently. For even more traction, have each family member memorize your mission statement. Then, family members can take it with them wherever they go.

1. We are at our best when...

2. We are at our worst when...

3. What does our family love doing together?

4. As a family, how can we better help one another?

5. As a family, what can we give to others and how can we help people outside of our family?

6. What do we need to change as a family?

7. On what principles do we want our family based?

8. What does each of us want to be in the future?

Stating the theme of a work of literature

- Use several abstract words to state the principle ideas of the work. Abstract words describe concepts or ideas that exist only in our mind like social status, ritual, defeat, alienation, freedom, prejudice, and ambition. We can see a particular man who is ambitious, like Macbeth, but the idea of ambition is an abstraction.
- Couple these notions or abstract ideas together with comments that reflect the author's observations about topics like human nature, the human condition or human motivation.
 - Human nature: Does the work focus on qualities of people, their pride, fear, alienation, or the past? Or does the focus seem to be on a single person or unit: the family, the child, or the adolescent?
 - Human condition: Does the plot, character, or setting comment on society, the limits it places on its citizens, the rituals that explain its beliefs, or the conflicts individuals have with the precepts of the society? Does the human condition reflect what is good and what is bad in the society, the role of women, the end of innocence, one's duty, or what ethics and laws guide behavior?
 - Human motivation: What drives the characters? Is it faith, revenge, disillusionment, the need to search or complete a journey, a sense of alienation, or keeping up appearances, dreams, fantasies, or social status?

Avoiding the common mistakes in writing a thematic statement

- Theme is not a moral. A moral tells us how to behave or what to do; it is meant to be instructive. A theme observes, weighs, and considers the actions of a character; theme avoids judging what a character should or should not do. Therefore, words like "ought" and "should" are not appropriate in a thematic statement.
- Themes are not short clichés or bumper sticker ideas. Themes reflect the complexity of life echoes in the work of literature.
- Themes do not refer to specific names or the events of the plot. Theme does not summarize a work although it does reflect what happens in the work. Theme drops character names and uses more general terms like "parents," "leaders," "society," or "adolescents" in a general observation about the human experience.
- Themes avoid absolute terms like "anyone," "all," "none," "everything," and "everyone" because they indicate sloppy thinking; they are categorical, no exceptions. Terms like "we," "often," and "sometimes" suggest a more realistic view of the variety of human experiences.

How to write a thematic statement example.

6. 7. Read the blog to get a complete idea of them. No matter what the odds, true men of character never give in to hypocrisy. Don't be obvious Stop being so obvious and always try to find more details of the story. For example, "love and hate" is not an affirmation but a theme. Identifying Areas of Conflict and Central Ideas Every story has a conflict of ideas. Alternatively, a thematic statement discusses views and actions taken. In the same way, it will also guide you towards the core concepts and values that make up a narrated story. Focus on the core thematic statements convey the message of the entire work in a single sentence. However, you can stick to them in cases where you are real and absolutely true. No Moral Edict Don't turn your issue into a moral edict. 4. Therefore, express a theme in your own words. It will help produce an original interpretation. Identifying Areas of Conflict and Central Ideas Every story has a conflict of ideas. No specifications You don't need to go into the details of what really happened. Therefore, you should use more general terms without referring to any particular name or event. Therefore, instead of talking about what happens, it is better to discuss what are the results of events. All creative writing requires a good subject to focus on. The one that contains a word is called typical. It makes sense to all the events of a narrative. Characteristics of a Good Thematic Statement A good statement should be general enough to capture the overall meaning of the work. It has no shredded sayings (clichés, maxims or aphorisms) The themes reflect the complexity of the echoes of life in the literary work. When a theme is created, the entire work is replaced by a single prayer.
